NK cells carrying receptors that bind an invader, such as CMV, proliferate, express more CMV surface receptors, and secrete immunostimulatory cytokines.

Such “memory” NK cells can live for months, primed to attack CMV upon reinfection.