

GNOME: Cells are incubated with gold nanoparticles (top); once the particles have settled on the cells, the molecule to be transfected is added as gold particles adhere to the cell membrane (middle); and irradiation with very brief pulses of a weakly focused green laser beam causes tiny holes to form in the cell membrane, allowing the diffusion of extracellular molecules into the cytoplasm (bottom).